

ROBINSON RENOMINATED.

It was not quite clear at first what Tammany was driving at in putting forward such men as C. W. Brooke, Grady and McGuire to start the ball of discussion on that side, while Dorsheimer, Cox, Kelly and Schell sat quietly in their seats; nor do I yet understand the significance of this arrangement of their forces, though I suppose there must have been some object in it. Brooke was well enough to start the thing off and nominate Slocum, and so was the part of the plan that put in "Baldy"

HOW TAMMANY WAS DEFEATED.
EVERY RESOURCE OF ORATORY AND TACTICS RE-SORTED TO TO PREVENT A DEFEAT—MR. KELLY
FINALLY NOTICED IN CONFUSION.
[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]
SYRACUSE, Sept. 11.—It was not long after the convention came to order this morning that the great issue was reached. The preliminary business was soon disposed of. The report of the Committee on Contested Seats, admitting Tammany alone from New-York City, was read and approved. The Committee on Organization reported Senator Jacobs as permanent chairman, and the Senator charitably declined to detain the convention by saying so much as a single word in the way of speech-making.

There was little to enliven the convention at this stage of the proceedings, except when a letter was announced from the platform for Thomas Dunlap, and the Tammany men broke out into a hearty laugh. It was said by some on that Mr. Dunlap had been watching to see

Certainly nothing could have made a worse impression upon the Convention than to remind them of all the inconsistent and foolish things the Democratic party has done. He told them that they nominated a General on a peace platform in 1864, but the people were not fooled by it; they nominated a hard-money man in 1868 on a soft-money platform, and the people were not

TYPES OF FRENCH DEMOCRACY

Belleville and the master mind had had for their political favorite Carnot, son of the Organizer of Victory. The silent victor of the Rue des Marais at that juncture pronounced for a younger man less hampered by social conventions and parliamentary friendships, who would not think it beneath his dignity to join in petting a volley of stones at the windows of the Tuileries. That young man was Gambetta, on whom the wine dealer had long had his eye. It was painful for him to abandon the spotless Carnot, who had represented Belleville from the time Braizat went to live there and had honored the vintner with his friendly regard. The schism was threatened in the democracy of the
